

Lal Masjid Bhati Gate

This mosque is located near the Bhati Gate Lahore properly known as Lal Masjid- the appellation Lal (red) signifying the colour with which it is profusely decorated and painted. The most has been renovated and rebuilt, losing its original features. The original mosque is properly popularity believed to have been constructed by Akbar, though it is more likely to be built during the Aurangzeb Alamgir's period as inferred from epigraphically evidence. The mosque is located on high ground. It is approached from the east by climbing 12 stamps almost 7 feet.
